1. The trailing stop serves as a guideline. If the P&L hits the trailing stop, the position is automatically closed. Since this updated 'scorecard' is published only weekly, it is the users' responsibility to track asset price movements between over a 12M holding period, based on Numera's probability forecast models. If P&L exceeds expected gain, then this becomes the new stop loss threshold to lock-in profits. 3. Returns calculated using data until January 12, 2025.

1. The 'special opportunities' box features either highly tactical trades (with a 1-3M holding period) or leveraged trades via put and call options. The trailing stop loss and expected gain is defined as above. 2. Returns calculated using data until options is the difference between the current options price for the underlying strike, and the contract premium.
